

BCECA Young Engineers' Sustainability Survey

At BCECA's inaugural virtual conference on 6th October 2021, the BCECA Young Engineers' Committee presented their findings from a survey of over 130 early career engineers within BCECA member companies, seeking their views on sustainability within the workplace. This work has now been published as a report which can be viewed on the BCECA website.

Summarising the findings of the report, BCECA Young Engineers' Committee Chair, John Vickers, said: "The report is our first contribution to a conversation upon which the future wellbeing and advancement of the U.K.'s engineering contracting sector depends. The findings are clear. Sustainability matters enormously to the next generation of engineering leaders. It seems that we are moving beyond the era of unbridled techno-optimism. Today's young engineers have a more nuanced view of industry's role in combating climate change. They are formulating their career decisions accordingly. Corporate leaders must pay heed to the hopes and expectations of this new, emerging workforce. They ignore it at their peril."

New BCECA Member

BCECA is very pleased to welcome its first Supplier Member into membership. Having trialled a number of BCECA committees over a four-month period and the inaugural BCECA virtual conference, ABB decided to join BCECA as a Supplier Member from January 2022. Troy Stewart, ABB's Head of Energy Industries UK and Ireland, commented, "I am delighted that ABB are now members of BCECA which champions the voices of engineering contractors within the process and energy sectors. ABB are looking forward to making full use of the many services that BCECA provide and of course attending events where we can network with our peers."

BCECA looks forward to a long and fruitful relationship with ABB.

New Website Recruitment Resource

A new page had been added to the Resource section of the BCECA website providing links to the recruitment pages of all the BCECA member companies' websites. This is designed to help students, graduates and employees who are seeking new roles within the engineering contracting industry.
